UH Ecosystems Work Draft Logic Model

Last updated Feb. 28, 2022

Impacts (Long-term)	Outcomes (Short-Medium Term)	Activities	Inputs
Connection to ʻĀina Communities share a deep sense of kuleana for Hawaiʻiʻs landscapes. They have an understanding of, vision for, and means of contributing to thriving landscapes and ecosystems.	● Opportunities & know-how for engaging in stewardship ● Learning materials about HI ecosystems and their management are readily accessed and used	● Presentations & Workshops ● Press releases & news articles ● Videos, posters, fact sheets, social media posts ● Art Installations ● Curriculum development ● Volunteer-Org matching	Staff & staff time Partner time, labor, and access Website development Video production materials & software Digital media creation software Conservation org info Funding Meeting facilities/ venues
Support for ʻĀina Stewardship Professionals Conservation/Watershed workers have adequate training and career opportunities	● Data & communication attract sustained adequate funding ● Increased "people capacity" ● Accessible professional development, mentorship, and peer support	● Tools & data for communicating with funders & legislators ● Professional Development Credits & Certificate in NREM
Thriving ʻĀina Conservation and restoration efforts are effective, evidence-based, and targeting clear objectives	● Minimal barriers to conservation actions ● Practical, available, and tested strategies ● Well-defined metrics of success ● Increased monitoring capacity	● Technical guides ● Repository/ directory of info ● Practice-based, manager co-led experiments ● Monitoring partnerships
Knowledge Sharing Conservation/Watershed stewards' knowledge, needs, and practices are identified and communicated among each other, researchers, and boundary organizations.	● Consistent & effective knowledge exchange opportunities ● Reliable feedback mechanisms between researchers & practitioners ● More/better syntheses of conservation/restoration strategies	● Workshops, Forums, Trainings ● Templates for planning & executing gatherings ● "Speed dating" for researchers & practitioners ● Repository/ directory of info ● Repository/ directory of orgs ● Material/ gatherings re: Emerging Technologies	